we made the silk stock, for you know, the stock of silk we had in the store was not keeping well. It stood around $2.10 per yard. We know something, however, of the silk we had, so we sold at $2.10—know where it is made; know also of what it is made; know the quality of the goods, and we satisfied about its wearing qualities. We admit that it gave only a small profit, that, in fact, we strain a point to sell it at this price; but the magnitude of our output and sales compensates us for the smallness of the profit. We sell at $2.10 per yard, and we have a very fine quality of silk, and we have excellent silk at $2.10, and giving it a yard, or, thereabouts, reaching 100 yds., at which price we give a better quality silk than can be purchased elsewhere for $1.60 per yard. PANY.

and that of the central, were the only points on which absolute unanimity was achieved; and it is observable that they are either matters of law or custom, and do not at all raise questions of local rivalry or of politics, and are not matters that have ever been in dispute.

There was at first a concurrence of opinion that all processes for the recovery of debt or damages originating in any one colony should have full effect in all the colonies, and it was agreed that a bill to give effect to this should be brought in and considered; but at a later date the legal committee, which had the bill under consideration, recommended that it be not proceeded with, so that the initial unanimity on this matter came to nothing.

obignom or placums" and trade marks was discussed, on the motion of Mr. VALE, who was supported by South Australia and New Zealand. But four of the colonies, for reasons which are not disclosed, voted against such recognition. A common patent law seems to be a preliminary to any common recognition; and seeing that the Conference found it more easy to agree on matters of law than on matters connected with politics, it is to be regretted that they did not try and shape some common law. It would be a very great gain to inventors if one patent law covered the whole of Australasia; and the income derivable from patent fees is so small that its distribution is not worth quarrelling over. It may be that the discussion revealed so much difference of opinion as to the true policy for dealing with inven-

Mr. MORRISON introduced the important subject of railway inter-communication, and proposed that Wentworth should be the junction point for the three Southern colonies. He said Mr. WARENS, supported by Mr. HENRY, moved that, in the absence of the necessary details, they discuss other information, it was undesirable to adopt the proposal at the present time, but that the Government of New South Wales should be prepared to consider it when the necessary information is obtained. It ought not to be very difficult to get this information, as the country is easy of transit, so far as the section between Hay and Wentworth is concerned. Whether, however, Wentworth is a good crossing-place, and whether from Wentworth to Chagella, on the border, the country is present we have very little knowledge. It quite certain that our line must connect with the South Australian somewhere, and it is quite time we determined where the Darling ought to be crossed. Mr. WATSON's amendment is equivalent to a pledge that his Government will cause the necessary surveys to be made.

The Federal Council Bill of Sir HENRY PARKES received support from South Australia and Tasmania, but was opposed by the three other colonies. Western Australia declining to vote. Victoria, which has, substantially, run through its land revenue, proposed that all revenues from the sale and occupation of public lands situated in each and all the colonies should be grouped under the Federal Council. This self-denying ordinance was opposed by all the other colonies, for the Summing up the results of the whole Conference, and comparing the subjects on which unanimity was arrived at with those on which there was difference of opinion, we find that the Conference agreed absolutely only on three subjects. They agreed to recommend an intercolonial Court of Appeal, as intercolonial admission of barristers, and as intercolonial currency to warrants. But they differed as to the tariff, they differed as to the Chinese, they differed as to the marine defences, they differed as to the High Commissioner for the South Seas, they differed as to the Federal Council, they differed as to intercolonial railway junctions, they differed ference was, therefore, much greater than the quantum of unanimity. A bare statement of this kind, however, is likely to make the amount of the difference appear larger than it really was. Thus, in respect of the intercolonial railway junction, the matter was simply postponed; and in respect of the commission to consider a common tariff there was only one dissentient. In dealing, too, with the question of South Sea Island atrocities, the representative of Western Australia did not disagree, but simply stood aside, as the question was an Imperial one; and the opposition of Mr. DICK, the Colonial Secretary of New Zealand, was confined to two out of six resolutions that were formulated. He would not consent to deprecate the union in the unanimity in all the other conclusions arrived at in reference to the South Sea administration, namely, that extended power should be conferred upon the High Commissioner for the punishment of natives guilty of crimes against British subjects, that an appeal should be allowed to the Supreme Court of some one of the colonies against the High Commissioner's convictions for felony; that the powers now exercised by the High Commissioner should at an early date be transferred to some Federal Court to be established in Australia; and that more frequent visits of her Majesty's ships among the islands would have a beneficial effect among the natives, and tend to lessen in a great degree the crimes now so prevalent. The Assembly made satisfactory progress on Thursday with the Fisheries Bill, which was read a second time, and considered up to section 10 in committee. The question has been investigated and reported upon by two Royal Commissioners, and although it is possible that neither the reports nor the facts in evidence have been studied so carefully as could be wished, it can hardly be doubted that these preliminary inquiries have done much to clear the way for legislative action, and to give it a right direction. The bill before Parliament is framed upon the lines laid down by the Commission which set a short time ago; and certainly in this instance, if it should pass into law it will not be said political theory, good for the soul; and police officers will join in the sentiment. The Learners elect Mr. Quick, ex pro Mr. Quick selects Learners, when bullets are going. The protectionist Learners are not so necessary, but they should be supplied with bullets to throw off. He must be furnished with assets to honor the drafts of the League, drawn at election time. "Other things being equal," however. It is perfectly clear what that qualification means. The phrase appears as though thrown in as a sort of moral ingredient to the resolution, because the wrong of monopoly is not just as clear as the wrong of the machine had for the old lady in the street. The Bendigo Learners are charmingly frank—and atrociously shameless.

A recent telegram informed us that the American Government, yielding to repeated solicitations, had agreed to bear half the expense of the transport of Australian mails across America. A better I than never. The British Government originally agreed to frank our mails from England as well as San Francisco. The American Government made a considerable charge for the transportation part of the service, and the British authorities expecting that, under the new Act, the Government would be able to make heavy charges on the colonies to bear this part of the expense. But they stood on their bond, and demanded a free delivery at San Francisco. The American Government contended that it was bound to pay the railway company, and therefore had to recover itself. We fail to see the force of the argument. The Government was able to make heavy charges on the colonies, and was able to make heavy charges. And even if it did have to pay, this was its contribution to the cost of a mail service by which it was greatly benefited, and in which the American-built ships were running. The company, too, might have been liberal to the colonies which at their sole cost were carrying up a service that was a great amount of traffic on their line. But the railway company has a monopoly, and can do as it likes for a long time, and the final result is that the railway company gets its payment, but the American Government agrees to pay half the cost. We trust that the Treasury at Washington will not seriously inconvenience by this liberality.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

It will be seen by our cable messages of this morning that Mr. Thomas Cassidy, the well-known author, seriously ill, and that fears are entertained that he will not recover. He was born in 1895, and is therefore in his 68th year. The town of Manchester has been thrown into a state of commotion by the death of the police officers of its having been reported to the police that attempts were to be made to destroy several prominent public buildings. Each of the places reported to have been marked for destruction has been placed in the keeping of military and police guards. The rebellion of the Boers attracted the attention of the Portuguese, who have extensive possessions in the East Indies, and have been admitted to the Legislature in favour of mediation by the Government at Lisbon between the British and the Boers.

In another part of to-day's issue we publish particulars of the cruise of H. M. S. Emerald around the South Sea Islands. The Emerald was sent to visit Solomon and other groups, with the object of visiting the natives for the recent massacres of British subjects.

The Legislative Council meets as usual to-morrow. The following is the business paper:—Government business.—Notice of motion: Sir John Robertson moves—"That so much of the standing orders as are inoperative would preclude the passing of the Bill of the day, and that the Bill be referred to its remainder during the present sitting of the Council." Order of the day: Consolidated Revenue Fund Bill; second reading.

The formal opening of the railway extension from Wellington to Dubbo will take place to-day, and latter town will be inundated with visitors. The ordinary trains from Sydney yesterday took up a number of people, and at 10.25 p.m. a special train, with about 300 passengers, left Sydney for the new terminus. The train formed a most inconspicuous procession, and the low fares fixed by the Commissioner for Railways for the occasion seem to be appreciated. At 11.30 p.m. the Ministerial train consisting of four saloon cars and the dining-car, left Sydney. In it were the Hon. Sir John Robertson, Hon. F. B. Sutor, the Hon. Charles Moore, M.L.A., Sir Patrick Jennings, Messrs. Alexander Stuart, A. Lloyd, J. W. Martin, Russell Barton, Edmund Barton, N. Melville, W. Heston, G. Coas, W. Proctor, J. M. Purves, J. Kidd, and F. Abinger. M.L.A.; Mr. C. Cowper (Sieriff), Mr. Henderson, Mr. F. Gannon, Mr. E. Lee (Maidland), Mr. John H. (Maidland), and others; and a number of ladies, wives and daughters of members of Parliament. There were about 75 passengers. The train arrived in Sydney at 1.15 p.m. and the ceremony of formally declaring the line open will be performed by Sir John Robertson and Mr. Sutor. There will be a procession of the friendly societies to a banquet, a free luncheon, and a ball in the evening together with a display of fireworks and other festivities.

YESTERDAY afternoon the Mayor of Sydney accompanied by the City Architect, the City Health Officer and the Inspector of Nuisances inspected a number of tenements which had been reported to be unfit for habitation. The first building visited was a tenement in the Central Police Court, the raucous condition of which has lately been brought under public notice. It was found to be in a very unhealthy state, and when the matting in the Court was removed a layer of dirt about two inches in thickness, the accumulation of years, was disclosed. The doors were so small that the light could not be seen, and the windows in many places, while there was about the place a small absolutely abominable. In one place amongst a quantity of old papers, was found a wire the silent witness, perhaps, in a charge of murder years ago. His Worship considered the building unfit for occupation, and resolved that notice to that effect should be served upon the Minister for Justice, and that the building should be pulled down to make way for a new structure, or made healthy and habitable. Visits were made to 310 and 312, Pitt-street, and to a number of tenements near them, occupied by Chinamen; and to 235 and 237, Castlereagh-street, also occupied by members of the Oriental race. Nos. 230, 266, 361, 353, 265, 257, 306, and 807, in the same street, also received the attention of the Mayor, as well as those in the Clark, which was reported to be unfit for habitation. The result of the visits will be, that a large number of the landlords will be informed that their tenements are unfit for habitation, and that they will be punished if they permit them to be occupied while others will be informed that they must repair their tenements at once. All the buildings inspected were similar in character to those which condemn some of the Chinamen were found keeping poultry in the festivities of their new year, while others were living. In one or two of the dens there were two living with Chinamen white women, two of whom were overcome with the influences of opium.

The weekly meeting of the Citizens' Water Supply Committee was held yesterday at the Town-hall, when Mr. G. Withers, M.L.A., occupied the chair, and all members were present. Mr. A. Forsyth proposed, and Mr. Poole, M.L.A., seconded, a motion authorizing the secretary to have printed and circulated a pamphlet containing the reports of Mr. Gilpin, and of a professional surveyor of the water supply, and the result of the meeting. The suggestion was unanimously adopted. Mr. Forsyth and Dr. Belgrave then brought up a report of their report to the General Committee. It was read and each paragraph commented on, and it was determined, as Mr. Gilpin and Mr. Clark's associates' reports were very ample, to avoid traversing the ground over by these gentlemen. One or two points were raised, but they were all decided to be carried home to the public the necessity for referring to two projects to an impartial professional authority. Dr. Belgrave thought that, however brief the address proper might be, it was essential that the report should conclude with a fair epitome of the main reasons which induced the committee to adopt the course they are taking. It was determined to defer the course

PARIS, Dec. 18.

The name of M. Barthélemy Saint-Hilaire naturally recalls that of Thiers, whose most intimate friend he was for many, many years, and brings us to the place of the death of Madame Thiers, which took place on the 12th of July, 1880, so long as her husband lived she was the most powerful woman in France, dwelling in the Palace of the Ellysées. After his death, which took place now a little more than three years ago, doing violence to her naturally retiring disposition, she devoted herself entirely and exclusively to the glory of her illustrious husband. Whenever his memory was honoured by public testimony, she was sure to be foremost in the ranks, no matter whether the ceremony took place in the Chamber of Deputies. If his memory were attacked she was the first to take up the pen to defend it. It was she who performed the colossal task of putting his manuscripts in order, and classifying his vast correspondence. She expired, so to say, pen in hand, correcting the proofs of her celebrated book on the Parliamentary speeches of her celebrated husband.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir.—Your correspondent, Mr. William Shaw, is undoubtedly correct to a very great extent, in attributing the cause of the "Long Nose" to the salt water. But I think that the "Long Nose" is possibly also partly right in his surmise that they result from the salt water being impregnated with sewage. I have no doubt that the sewage is carried to the sea by Barry by supposing the cause to originate from the salt water itself. We have no proof, as far as I am aware, of any similar evil arising in any of the places at some where there is a sewerage disposal, but I think that it is worth the trouble and it would be very easy to ascertain if such is the case in any of the places mentioned. I have been to the sewage disposal at Wellington, New Zealand, where this plan has been adopted for some time, and which also has a sewage discharge into the sea, and I have not observed any such "Long Nose" in the immediate vicinity—I might almost say waters—of one of the principal bays.

My own opinion is, that the nuisance complained of may be referred to the following causes, viz., those already alluded to as set forth by Mr. Shaw and "Long Nose":—and further, to the fact of the sewers themselves requiring to be cleaned out, and the fact of the sewage above the matter deserves immediate attention and remedy.

A few days ago I read a paragraph in your issue alluding to the "Long Nose" and I was glad to find that it was SANOA.

My way of Fiji, we have news from Sanoa to the 15th inst. The following is the news of particular interest:

The Itu-o-tane have surrendered unconditionally, the besiegers having invested them by land and sea and reduced them to a state of starvation. On Monday, the 29th, the O.V. Party, including the O.V. and some provisions, chiefs of Atua and Anna, marched out of the forts, delivering up their arms to a guard. "Vaka papalagi." Over 30 rifles, five boats, two canoes, and all personal baggage were taken to the O.V. camp. The victorious side. Note the withstanding these reverses, Maseua counsel resistance to the bitter end. On the 23rd December a boat was attacked by some Atua people, as the shore, close to a premises of the London Missionary Society, and two of the occupants a sick man who had been brought to Malua for medical aid and his brother attending on him, were decapitated. The bodies were thrown into the sea.

Information was received on Thursday, the 28rd, that the districts of Salepa and Samata had broken off from the O.V. Party.

was correct. When he was in Brisbane had a portion of Leichhardt's journal, as well as the papers from Classen. The paper upon which the portion of Dr. Leichhardt's journal was written was of a large size, and the large number of red marks or lines across it. He left the telegraph station in search of Classen in December, 1872, and was away four months. He was about nine days when he went back to the Government station afterwards, and returned with the bag and paper Classen and met him at the same place. He went back to the line, after he saw Classen the first time, was 1st June, and remained there until September when he started back to the Government station. The country there was one of the finest ever saw. In extent it was about 400 miles, and there was plenty of water, grass, and game. The blacks were friendly until they got within 100 or 150 miles of the line, but when they got there they were frightened. The land was a tableland, with red pipeclay on the Hume could go anywhere. He was a black man. Moses saw him deliver a primitive communication to an officer on the telegraph line. He came down from the Boper with Hume, and they were in company about 36 days coming from the Boper to Townsville. Hume never opened the satchel to him, and nobody else asked him that he was aware of. Hume talked the blacks' language with great fluency. It was evident that he could communicate with the blacks in their own language. He could go into the midst of the blacks, and sit down with them, let some of the other men come up and talk to him, let one of the men come up with a person in the bush, said Moses, they would always come "swinging" around him, and Hume was evidently one of their friends.

The following communication, signed with the initials such was the case, the Rev. Mr. Miller, of Leithen, presided. The Rev. Mr. Griffin, secretary of the English Lord's Day Observance Society, having addressed the meeting, the Rev. Mr. Miller then read a paper in which he pointed out such proposals as those promoted by the body calling itself "The Sunday Society," and by others, for the opening of the Sabbath to the use of the secular press, and for abolishing the continuation given to such suggestions at the Social Science Congress lately held in this city, as being mischievous in itself and involving an unwarrantable intrusion of the secular press into the domain of the church and of its best interests; and that it urgently calls upon the Christian public to take all advisable steps for the defence of the Sabbath against every species of open violence and against every species of insidious attack. The Rev. Mr. Miller, which was adopted. The Rev. Mr. Muir, Dalnemy, moved:—

"That the conference earnestly recommends all who are concerned for the maintenance and peace of the Lord's Day to abstain from every species of secularism, and to remain catholic in its membership, practical in its aims, and well fitted to counteract the secularizing influences that are so numerous and potent in this country. The motion was carried unanimously and with acclamation. The motion was

which discards flaws. I have given the narrative the form of personal recollections, because I speak of proceedings which I have seen and shared, and I desire to keep before the reader the fact that this is no fiction. I have endeavored to avoid any personal sympathies and prejudices. But I have written at the circumference of half the globe from the center of action, at a time when the chief actors are used to the fact that they are being watched, and have been longer inclined to ask or fear from fortune. This narrative may serve the purposes for which it was written, and as a useful purpose, the first condition is that it shall be not only true, but also just. I have not been ungenerous in my justice. I have aimed to give it that character; whenever there was question of motive, or of character, I have given the best explanation. I have not stirred over the difficulty, but have taken the fairest view to be fair as if I were engaged on a last confession.

In every word of this explanation there is the ring of sincerity, and the facts set down for the first time in this book deserve to be considered purely upon their merits. For the decade covered by the

Our Melbourne telegrams inform us that, on Sunday morning, the Rev. Dr. Cairns was found dead in his bed, having apparently passed away peacefully during the night. What Dr. Lang was in the religious world of New South Wales, Dr. Cairns was in Victoria. He was a man of great mental vigour, influenced by strong likes and dislikes, and possessing a full share of that intellectual combativeness which is supposed to be a characteristic of Scotch ecclesiastics. He served his license to preach the gospel in the month of December, 1823, and was inducted as minister of the parish of Marston, in Presbiterian, in the month of September, 1826. The interval was spent in a severe mental conflict, but eventually he threw himself into the work of his office. "I was," as I had been a hard student," said

I think that it is very probable that the "Long Nose" is caused by Barry by supposing the cause to originate from the salt water itself.

By the way, I am very sorry that, without the obvious consent of the voters, I am attributing the obnoxious colour to the water in decomposing horse dung. "Long Nose" is possibly also partly right in its surmise that the water in the harbour is not so much a matter from Darling Harbour; but I cannot agree with Dr. Barry in supposing the cause to originate from the salt water of the Pacific Ocean. I have seen a very similar evil arising in all of the places at home where the sea water has been applied to purposes of street-watering; and I would very much like to see the water in the harbour, New South Wales, where this plan has been adopted for some time, and which also has its sewage discharged into the harbour, and, strange to say, like ours, in the immediate neighbourhood of the principal wharves—one of our principal bays.

My own opinion is, that the numerous complaints of may be, and the fact that the water is not so much as it is alleged to be, are both wrong. I am inclined to be allied to an act forced by Mr. Shaw and "Long Nose"; and further, to the fact of the sewers themselves requiring to be thoroughly cleaned out, and the water, however, the matter requires immediate attention and remedy.

A few days ago I read a paragraph in your issue alluding to the fact that the water in the harbour is not so much

The Itu-oto have surrendered unconditionally, thus ending the long and bloody civil war between the two tribes having resulted thus far in many deaths and enormous quantities of starvation. Some of the lakes were very large. There was very large one with deep water. It was about 60 or 80 feet deep about 60 or 100 yards from the margin. The distance from where he found Classen to where he left him in December would be about 500 miles. It might be a little more, but no great deal, because he could do it in nine days. It would be good riding, but still he could do it. He brought relics from that place, but there was further relics of Leichhardt still there. He accompanied vernance Society, having addressed the meeting, the Rev. Dr. Borg moved,—"That this conference solemnly deprecates all weapons of war, whether they be swords or spears; That the Mayday League, and by others, for the opening of The Temple Gates and art galleries on the Lord's Day; that it deplores the countenance given to such suggestions at the Social Science Congress, lately held in this city, as being pernicious in itself and involving an unwarrantable intrusion on the part of that association likely to alienate many of its best friends; and that it urgently calls upon the Christian public to take all admissible steps for the defence of the Sabbath against every species of open violence and profanation." Professor Calderwood seconded the motion which was adopted. The Rev. Mr. Muir, Dalnangy, moved,—"That the conference earnestly recommends all who are concerned for the maintenance and peace of the Lord's Day to support the Sabbath Alliance of Scotland as an organization devoted to its membership, provisionally to situate, and well fitted to counteract the secularizing influences that are so numerous and powerful, thus eminently deserving alike of moral sympathy and influential aid." The motion was seconded by Mr. James Bailloun, Wemyss. The proceedings then terminated.

AIRMAN.—JOSIAS WHITCOMB'S REMEDY. Prepared from a German recipe obtained by the late Josias Whitcomb, Esq., an illustrious statesman, and one of the ablest physicians of his age. It alleviated this disorder in his case when all other remedies had failed him, and has since been found equally efficacious in medical skill had been abandoned by him in despair. In Europe, where it is now sold under the name of "Whitcomb's Remedy," it has relieved, innumerable cases of this distressing complaint, and has procured for its inventor the highest testimonials of relief. It contains no poisons or injurious properties whatever; nor is least may take it with perfect safety. JOSIAS WHITCOMB'S REMEDY FOR THE CURE OF ALL AFFECTIONS OF THE THROAT AND LUNGS. PREPARED BY JAMES BAILLOUN, ESQ., SECRETARY OF PARLIAMENT. MANUFACTURED BY JOHN BARNES & CO., GLASGOW. Sole Agents, Messrs. MOORE, MACLEAN, and Co., ABERDEEN.

I have seen and shared, and I desire to keep before the reader the fact that it is the testimony of an actor in the accused's case, and that it is the expression of personal sympathies and prejudices. I have written it, not as a circumferencer of half the globe four or five times to ask as I have been tortured. That is the scene of action, at a time when the chief actors are dead, and when I myself must soon follow them, and have no opportunity of doing more than to tell the tale. The narrative may serve the purpose for which it is written, or any useful purpose, the first condition is that it shall be not only accurate but just, and that it shall not be ungenerous in its justice. I have aimed to give it this character; whenever there was question of motives, or of competing policies, or of personal reputation. I have not shrunk over the difficulty, but have as scrupulously striven to be fair as if I were engaged on a last confession.

In every word of this explanation there is the stamp of sincerity, and the facts "set down for the first time" in this book "deserve to be considered purely upon their merits. For the decade covered by this work, or at least for the half of it included in this first volume, the story of repeal has never before been so well told by so competent an authority. The narrative opens in 1840, when O'Connell, in his 66th year, established the Repeal Association, so often thronged before. The aims of that body, as described by the founder, were "To dissolve the Legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland, and to procure fixing of tenure for landholders." The surface, shorter Parliament, was a small
